RAISE PENNANT BEFORE CROWD

Bristol, Va., July 10.—The 1912 Appalachian pennant was hoisted on the Bristol grounds Wednesday afternoon with appropriate ceremonies and with a large number of enthusiastic fans in attendance. The pennant was raised with the Johnson City team in attendance, as this was the team which gave Bristol such a merry chase for the "rag," the latter winning by only a few points. This was the first pennant ever hoisted in Bristol, and it celebrates the first victorious season for the Bristol team. Appropriate talks were made by Mayor Warren and E. K. Bachman, and the music was furnished by the Bristol Military Band. It is the hope of Munson to win the honors of the last half of the 1913 season, so that Bristol and Johnson City may again contest in an exciting series to determine which is to have the pennant.

IN REAL LIFE PART PASTOR FAVORS LIKE UNTO 'SARAH'

to Stage for Her Own Support.

Lead Through Garden of Roses.

New York, July 10.—Pauline Frederick, the actress, wife of Frank M. Andrews, the well-known architect, who last autumn returned to her beloved profession, bent upon re-establishing herself as one of the leading women on the American stage, is playing a real life part similar to that of Sarah, in "The Little Princess," it was learned to-day.

"The Little Princess," it was learned today.

The sudden change of social station for this beautiful young woman, she declared to-day, is because her rich husband has failed to provide properly for her maintenance. She still resides in an elegant apartment at 26 Central Park, South, but even this is to be given up just as soon as the lease expires. Where she will then reside she does not know. Mr. Andrews is now occupying a suite at the St. Regis Hotel.

"When I married Mr. Andrews four years ago," said Miss Frederick to-day, "I decided to choose a career of love instead of fame. But I soon saw that the pursuit of love and happiness was not a silvery puth

"My opportunity to go back to the stage came when Joseph and His Brethren" was produced at the Century Theatre. So we parted. My husband had agreed orally to pay me $150 each week, but this was given only once, and I have since been forced to meet all expenses for myself and for mother, who is my constant companion.
"I know that Mr. Andrews wants me to become legally separated, but I intend, for the time being, to go peacefully along. He's too anxious for this. With this other woman he is often seen by me at restaurants. Only the other day, when mother and I were dining at the Claremont, he sat near us. The wife of the officer in the Dragoon Guards was with him and I know, as they sat there clinking their glasses, that the toast was: 'Here's to my wife and sweetheart; may they never meet.'

"Of course, I have struggled in the pastworked hard before getting my chance to rise from the chorus. Then it was pleasant to step into a position of affluence—to become the wife of Mr. Andrews, But I is harder yet to give up everything and live only on the salary of an actress. But I will do it."

Mr. Andrews, it was said at the St. Regis. was out. His secretary said he would have nothing to say, anyway.
